

Learn About BJA NTTAC Technology Initiatives Assessment Resources for State, Local, and Tribal Criminal Justice Agencies.

January 2020

The Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) National Training and Technical Assistance Center (NTTAC) offers training and technical assistance (TTA) to criminal justice agencies to enhance or expand their capabilities to use technology to make informed decisions, respond effectively, and prevent crime. Through a comprehensive review of an agency's technical resources and capabilities, BJA NTTAC's TTA resources aim to provide actionable recommendations across the technology landscape.

The following approach is a guide to the types of assistance BJA NTTAC supports under the Technology Initiatives Assessment TTA Program for state, local, or tribal criminal justice agencies:

- Conduct a technology review to catalog available resources and data sources.
- Evaluate data collection and storage procedures.
- Present best practices for disparate data source consolidation.
- Recommend staff training or modifications to increase capacity and capability.
- Assess the cohesiveness of existing technology infrastructures.
- Quantify the cost and value of current technologies.
- Identify gaps and needs in the technology landscape by examining areas such as dispatch software, records management software, mobile technologies, case management systems, crime analysis capabilities, information technology support, and other related technologies.
- Provide a set of actionable recommendations to enhance technology-driven initiatives in the areas of systems integration, staffing needs and capabilities, data sharing, security and maintenance, software adoption, mobile technology, and video capture and storage.
- Evaluate and incorporate promising models and evidence-based practices in each phase of the training or technical assistance solution.

Technology Initiatives Assessment is just one example of the range of TTA that BJA NTTAC provides to state, local, and tribal agencies. If you or your agency is facing a unique criminal justice need, BJA NTTAC may be able to provide support for TTA services.
